

Fatal Crash Ends Long Friendship

Two Die As P. E. Car Hits Auto Near Here

When Chester David Klopff of Manhattan Beach is released from Jared Sidney Torrance Memorial hospital and is able to return to his work at the Southern California Edison company's Terminal Island plant, he will ride to work alone for the first time in 12 years.

His morning and evening partner on the daily trips, William Cota, 46, of El Nido, was killed with George Henderson, 23, of Manhattan Beach, when Klopff's car was hit at the 190th street Pacific Electric crossing early Tuesday morning by a north-bound P. E. mail train.

Klopff, 45, is recovering at the hospital here from several fractured ribs, numerous cuts and bruises. He doesn't know how he escaped the same fate that befell his fellow workers. His car was tossed 50 feet by the train and young Henderson was hurled 30 feet farther north along the tracks. His neck was broken, his skull fractured. He had been riding beside Klopff, who was driving.

Mr. Cota, on the right side of the back seat of the eastbound auto where the mail train hit it, was killed instantly. His body was extricated from the wreckage. Klopff miraculously escaped with his minor injuries. Although he declares he made the crossing stop, he says he did not notice the approaching train, did not see it until he climbed out of his car's wreckage.

Roman C. Clotiaux of Los Angeles, motorman of the train, told deputy sheriffs he saw the auto stop for the crossing as he sounded his whistle. Then it appeared suddenly directly in front of his mail car. The crossing is a few feet west of Normandie avenue in the Los Angeles shoe string strip.

Unusual Exhibit Coming Dec. 8 To Library

"Romeo and Juliet" Panels Show Movie Research In All Phases

One of the most interesting exhibits ever to be presented in the lecture room of the Torrance public library will go on view Tuesday, Dec. 8. This will be the first showing outside of Los Angeles of 10 of the 14 panels dealing with various phases of the production of "Romeo and Juliet" by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

For a long time librarians have been aware of the close alliance between libraries and films. They recognize that motion pictures have been a powerful influence in stimulating interest in the classics, biographical and historical reading.

Mrs. Dorothy Jamieson, Torrance librarian, became interested in the "Romeo and Juliet" exhibit when it was first announced and her efforts to obtain it for a local showing were recognized by the film company in granting the source material display to this city for its first outside exhibition. This will last only for two weeks.

Depicts Notable Scenes
The series of panels reveals the source material from which costumes, stage sets and properties were drawn and even the inspiration for the casting of the various parts. One deals with the workers responsible for the production, Talbot Jennings, author of the screen version of the play; Oliver Messel, English stage designer; Cedric Gibbons, who "rebuilt Verona in Hollywood"; George Cukor, director, and the late Irving G. Thalberg, producer.

Another panel illustrates the costumes and make-up used, a third is devoted to properties and sets; one illustrates how several architectural features were utilized; and others depict the treatment of highlights in the age-old romance—the Sycamore Grove, the Capulet ball, the famous Balcony Scene, Friar Laurence's Cell, Death of Mercutio, Juliet's tomb and others.

Mrs. Jamieson announces that all friends and patrons of the library will be welcome to see this exhibit any time the library is open. There will be no charge.

SCHOOL CLUB TOURS PLANT
Party of 23 Sees All Parts of Steel Firm

Fulfilling another objective of its membership, the "Know-Your-Torrance" club of the Fern Avenue school and 14 guests from the Torrance Elementary and High schools toured the Columbia Steel plant Tuesday evening.

With Karl Semenz of the engineers' office and Walter P. Wallace, editor of The Steel Blade, as guides the group enjoyed an informative visit in all departments of the city's largest industrial concern. Club members making the trip were Mrs. Sabrey Botkin, Miss Margaret Hollenbach, Mrs. Gwen Moon, Miss Esther MacDuff, Mrs. Martha Cardwell, Miss Laura Thomas, Mrs. Oda Vans, Mrs. Ann Austin, and Mrs. Martha Connell. The visitors from the other schools were Mrs. Gertrude Haydon, Mrs. Eva Burns, Mrs. Helen Berry, Miss Myrtle Leary, Mrs. Vera Godwin, Mrs. Lila Husted, Mrs. Hilda Powell, Miss Irene Mills, Miss Madeline McLogue and Raymond J. Moon, Robert G. Vans, J. S. Austin, John M. Connell and James W. Way.

TWO ACADEMY APPOINTMENTS OPEN IN DIST.
There is a vacancy for 1937 at the Military Academy at West Point, and another at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, to be filled by the recommendation of Congressman Charles J. Colden. Because of the large number of applicants, Colden has requested the civil service commission to hold an examination at the postoffice building in San Pedro, Dec. 12, for selection for appointment.

All those who are qualified as residents of the 17th Congressional district and who desire to take this examination should communicate with Colden at his Washington address, 237 House Office Building, at once, secure important information and credentials for taking the examination.
